Apostrophes show possession and contraction;
They're a type of punctuation - they get a lot of action.
They shorten two words or claim what's theirs;
Yeah, apostrophes – you see them everywhere!

The dog's collar is red and bright;
The apostrophe shows it's the dog's by right.
But in "don't run," it shortens the phrase;
Apostrophes shine in so many ways!

They shorten two words or claim what's theirs;
Yeah, apostrophes – you see them everywhere!

That boy's bike is parked outside;
The apostrophe tells you that it's his ride.
In "you're kind," it's a contraction too;
Apostrophes work for me and you!

They shorten two words or claim what's theirs;
Yeah, apostrophes – you see them everywhere!

The teachers' lounge is where they meet;
The apostrophe says their space is sweet.
And in "they're happy," the apostrophe's there;
It joins two words to keep your writing square!
